ENTERPRISE IN WASH

Many factors influence the potential for enterprises to play effective roles

- Evidence of the effectiveness of enterprise engagement in WASH is mixed

But why?

- 120 interviews with national and local government, enterprises, local and international civil society organisations and donors in Indonesia, Vietnam and Timor-Leste
- Political economy analysis focused on the formal and informal links and interactions between organisations and individuals

The starting point most often assumes enterprises will be 'for-profit' but what about social enterprises?

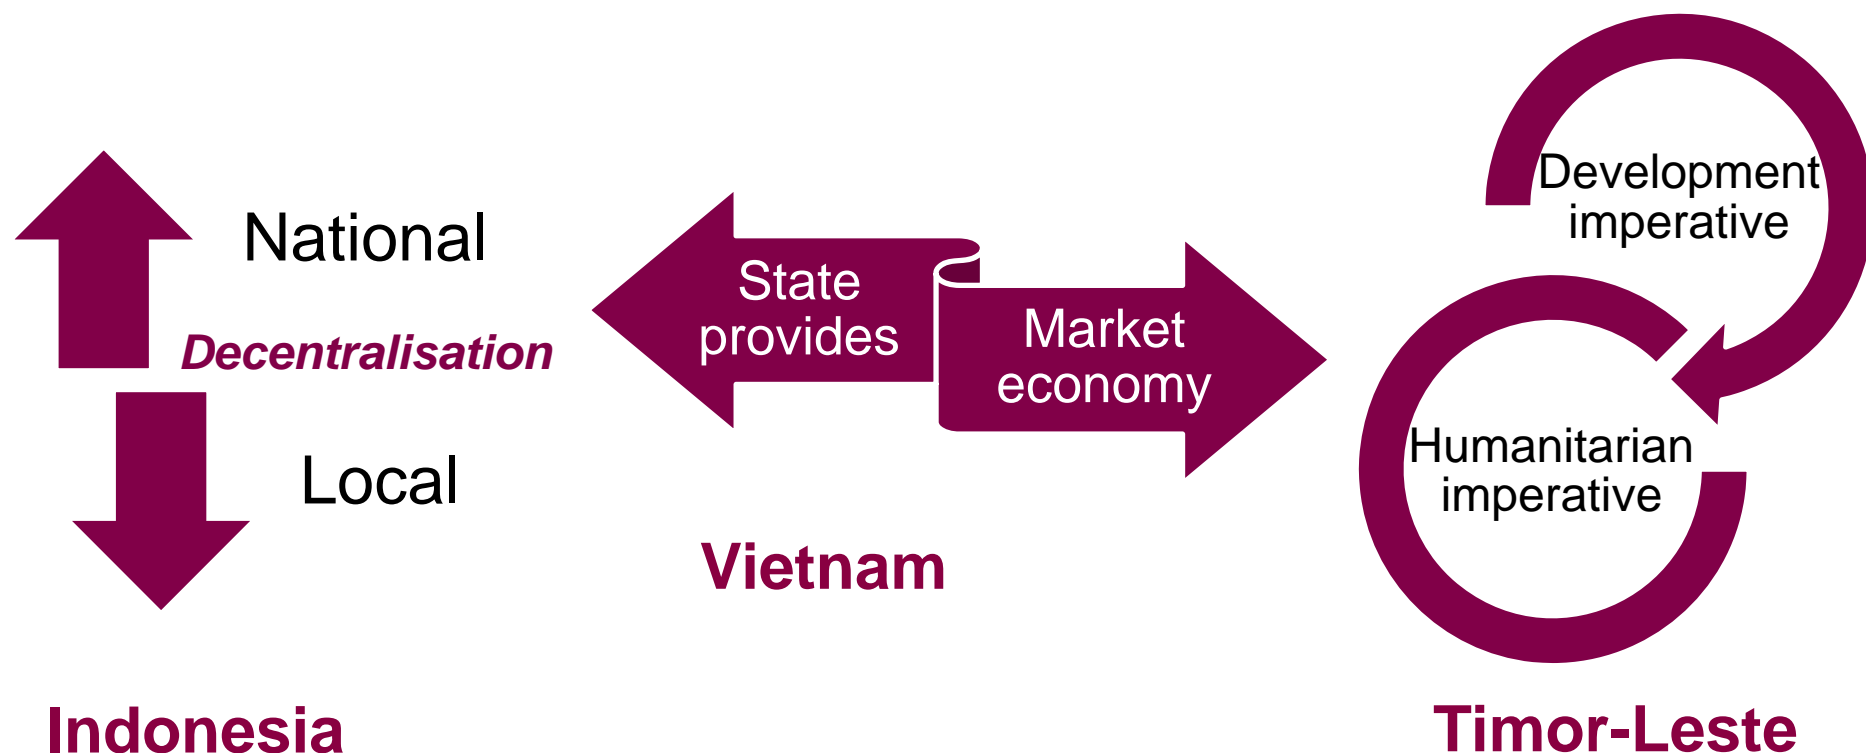

The starting point most often assumes enterprises will be 'for-profit' but what about social enterprises?

They may respond to different incentives based on their motivations
Appropriate legal structures and policy settings rarely exist

The national and local political economy shape which enterprise roles are possible and viable

The status of private sector strongly influenced if and how enterprises were playing roles

Incentives can create a supportive local policy environment for enterprises

Coverage
targets

Financial
incentives

Prestige and recognition

Barriers can prevent a supportive local policy environment for enterprises

We must look beyond a 'one-size-fits-all' approach to enterprise development in WASH

Thank you!
